Fern Flaman

Fern Flaman spent half a century in hockey, 17 of those as a player in the NHL. His career has led him to induction in the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1990.

In 1947 Fern made the NHL on a regular basis. He was a devastating hitter on the Boston Bruins blueline for three and a half seasons before being traded to the Toronto Maple Leafs where he won his own Stanley Cup championship. After Bill Barilko's death, Fern was asked to pick up the slack as the heavy hitter on the Leaf team. Three years later, the Leafs traded Fern back to Boston where he played the final 7 seasons of his career.

Fern Flaman played in the NHL all-star game 6 times (1952 & 1955 – 1959)

Fern also was a coach and GM in the minors and then for 19 years was the coach of Northeastern University. Following this, he became a scout for the New Jersey Devils and added further to the vast list of friends he made in over 50 years of hockey.
