Jesse Rogers

Jesse was a catcher and outfielder for the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro Leagues in 1953-54. He was nicknamed Mr. Long Ball for reasons which are apparent.

After playing in KC, he signed with the New York Giants and played two seasons in their minor league system. He also played in the minors for the Chicago Cubs from 1958 to 1960 after having been signed by his former KC manager, the late Buck O'Neill. Some of his legendary teammates include Lou Brock, Billy Williams, Orlando Cepeda, Willard Brown, Bill White and George Altman.

After his baseball career ended, Jesse spent 29 years with the United States Postal Service from 1961 to 1989. He is also an ambassador for the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum in Kansas City, the city in which he still resides.

A great story teller, Jesse will share the great stories of the Monarch's legends with your group. What else would you expect from a man whose children are named Faith, Hope, Joy, Gay and Jesse III. Got to be a great guy with those names! And he is.
