

Todd Stottlemyre

Todd Stottlemyre is a winner! He was in his baseball career and he is now in his career as a motivational speaker. As an MLB pitcher, Todd was a World Series Champion with the Toronto Blue Jays in both 1992 and 1993, and was a part of the Arizona Diamondbacks championship team in 2001. He won 138 career games over 15 seasons and was known as a player who gave everything he had in order to help his team to victory.

Stottlemyre is the son of star Yankees pitcher Mel Stottlemyre who went on to become a legendary pitching coach. Interestingly, Todd pitched for 15 seasons while his father threw for 11 seasons. The younger Stottlemyre played for the Oakland Athletics, St. Louis Cardinals and Texas Rangers in addition to his years with the Blue Jays and Diamondbacks. Todd won both the Branch Rickey Award and the Lou Gehrig Award in the 2000 season. After retirement, Stottlemyre became a stock market analyst and then became a day trader.

His successes in life did not come without struggles and challenges. It is these experiences that have led Todd to become the high-performance business coach and speaker that he is today. His goal is to inspire others to dream big, create goals and to live a life without limits. Recently he has authored the best-selling book titled “Relentless Success” which outlines his system for achievement.

Stottlemyre firmly believes that anyone can succeed if they are willing to go through the necessary challenges in order to achieve their desired level of success. If you thought Todd was passionate playing baseball, you need to hear the fire in him as a business coach! As he says, “The impossible just hasn’t been done yet.” Hire Todd to speak to your organization and help take them to the next level of success.
